1. The Institute of Experimental Physics (Instytut Fizyki Eksperymentalnej) was attached to the University of Warsaw. It was located at 69 Hoza Street, Warsaw, in an old building that stood alone in a garden and was surrounded by an iron fence. In 1951 or 1952 a new building was constructed and used as a high tension laboratory.
2. I heard that some experiments on atomic energy were carried out there. I have no further information about the work except that studies and research on experimental physics were carried on there by Professor PIENKOWSKI and Professor SOLTAN.
3. I know that the Institute was not guarded and that there were no standing security measures in force regarding experiments conducted there by the assistants and students.
